

WOULD RETALIATE AGAINST ROADS

ti-Pass Regulation Quite Unpopular.

WIDESPREAD MOVEMENT

Congress May Reduce Immense Pay- ment Made for Handling Mails.

The unusual number of statesmen who returned, in time for New Year Day, from their holiday vacations, is accepted as the first positive evidence that the anti-pass regime recently announced by the railroads has become effective. How long it will continue is still debatable; but that transportation is being cut off now is certain.

The disposition to retaliate against the railroads has been shown already in different quarters. In Philadelphia, the city and county officers who suddenly found themselves without passes dug up some old laws governing railroad speed within the city, and threatened to enforce them to the great embarrassment and expense of the companies. The Pennsylvania legislators are threatening already to make trouble for the railroads. The proposal to permit trolley roads to carry freight, and the suggestion that a State commission investigate actual distances by rail, and compare them with the distances for which conductors "pull mileage" are early proposals looking to retaliation. It is alleged that the traveling public is paying mileage in many cases excessive, because where lines have been straightened the old distances, by the round-about line, are still charged for.

Would Cut Rate.
In Congress a more effective plan of getting at the railroads is already talked about. It related to paring down the immense payment the Government makes for handling mails by rail. About $50,000,000 a year is paid for this service, and it is declared that this could fairly be cut down one-half without injustice to the railroads. The other half has long been regarded as a sort of subsidy.

This proposal, written into a Congressional bill, would be a dangerous one for the railroads. If the House should pass it, the Senate already burdened with the odium of its alleged friendliness toward the roads, would have trouble finding an excuse for refusing to accept the new terms. And once passed, the measure would have to be repealed. The railroads would have to find some other way of making up the loss.

Postoffice in Sympathy.

The Postoffice Department is understood to be in sympathy with the idea of cutting down this item of expense. Mr. Cortelyou having in one address indicated his conviction that they are overpaid. He thinks the present rates constitute a maximum schedule, which he is at liberty to reduce in his discretion, but it would, of course, be easier for the department if Congress would take the responsibility of making the cut.

ANNA AMERICA ALLAIMBY NOW A HAPPY BRIDE

Miss Anna America Allaimby, of 918 I street northwest, and John Rosanni, of New York, who were reported to be eloped about two weeks ago, were married last night at the home of H. B. Matthews, 511 F street northwest, by Rev. John Bauschick.

Mr. and Mrs. Rosanni departed for New York immediately after the ceremony, and will take up their residence in that city, where the groom is engaged in business. The ceremony was the culmination of a pretty little romance. The bride is the daughter of Pedro Allaimby, former attaché of the American legation at Constantinople, and at present connected with the Congressional Library. Miss Allaimby was born at the legation in the Ottoman capital nineteen years ago. General Wallace was at the time minister to Turkey, and he bestowed upon her the name Anna, for his mother, and America, for his country.

DEPARTMENT IN TOUCH WITH DRYDOCK DEWEY

The navy yard here is receiving regular messages from the drydock Dewey, morning and night, detailing the progress of the huge craft in the long trip to the Philippines. The messages come by wireless and are full and accurate. The vessel is now some 300 miles off Cape Henry, and is laboring against a heavy sea. The weather has been dark and much rain has fallen, but the promise is for better weather. The progress being made is slow. The Glacier has extended a tow line to the forward starboard corner of the dock, but in the heavy sea is unable to guide the course of the craft.

LAUREL CLAY COMPANY GETS INTO THE COURT

Involuntary proceedings in bankruptcy were commenced in the local courts today against the Laurel Clay Products Company, which had the original contract for the furnishing of 12,000,000 bricks for the new railway terminal station.

The petition was filed by William Monogue, Louis Kullie, William F. Sullivan, and Michael J. Keane, who ask that a receiver be appointed by the court to take charge of, manage, and wind up the affairs of the corporation.

Oldfield having scored 29 points to Chevrolet's 12.

ARMY OF CHICAGOANS DRINK TO 1906

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—At 12 o'clock midnight more than 20,000 persons, by actual count, drank to Father Time and the New Year in this city.

RECEPTION WERE INTERESTING

Attendance Was a Record Breaker and Composed of All Classes of People, Young and Old—Forty-three Greeted President Every Minute.

In two or three distinct features the New Year reception at the White House was the most notable in the history of these annual affairs. The number of persons received exceeded that of any previous year by at least 1,000, and the President was shaking hands with nearly three-quarters of an hour longer than he or any other President ever did on a similar occasion in the past. Then there was a reception within a reception. Miss Alice Roosevelt, charmingly goateed and scattering smiles as bright and happy as May swallows, with her fiancé, Representative Longworth, was the center of attraction wherever she moved. Her impromptu reception in the East Room early in the day was the most interesting feature of an immensely interesting and important function.

The official figures as given out at the White House today show that the President shook hands with 4,052 persons. Vice President Fairbanks was the first to pass through the doors of the Blue Room and greet the Chief Executive. This was about 11:15 a. m. The last person to grasp the President's hand was a pretty young girl about twenty years old. This was at 2:46 p. m. President Roosevelt, therefore, spent 21 minutes in shaking hands.

The average number of persons greeted every minute was forty-three. The average last year was not much above thirty per minute, when 7,115 persons were received in all.

There were more children, perhaps, at yesterday's reception than ever before, and it was noticeable that the President took more pains to greet them than the grown people. Scores of times he almost bent double to grasp the tiny hand of some little tot who did not reach his waist.

And Mr. Roosevelt did not neglect the babies. Many mothers and fathers carried their infants through the White House doors. Two little girls, evidently sisters, about eight and six years of age, respectively, came in bearing their dolls. The first one had a doll almost as big as herself. The second and third were much smaller, but the Presidents did not shrink from the young lady, and also shook hands with the second doll. It was discovered today that the usher who counted the number of hands shaken failed to record these two. Therefore, the official number should be 9,074 instead of 9,072.

Close behind these little girls came a very black colored man with his four sons, ranging from twelve years down to three. They were the proudest dusky lads in Washington last night.

One very old colored man, judging from appearance nearly ninety years old, slowly marched past the receiving line without shaking hands with the President. After he had passed out he was asked by reporters why he did not shake hands with Mr. Roosevelt after his long wait in the line.

The old fellow shook his head energetically and said: "I ain't fit to shake hands wid dat man. I jist wanted to hev it to say dat I had laid my eyes on de President before I die."

An Italian fruit vender, with his three boys, all wearing red sweaters, were prominent figures in the line. The boys and their father were so friendly that they would not come off, after they had shaken hands with the President. In Italy a man might live for a hundred years without having the privilege of speaking to the King.

Major Loeffler, the President's doorkeeper, who has been at the White House since 1893, and who has been in attendance at every New Year reception since he became attached to the White House staff, said that it was the longest and largest he had ever witnessed.

All of the President's sons were in the Blue Room during a large part of the time in which the public was passing. Theodore, Jr., had three of his Harvard classmates with him, and Kermit and Archie also had a friend or two.

It would be interesting to calculate the amount of handshaking energy expended by the President in yesterday's work. All of his handshakes, even to the very last, were strong and cordial, with a good elbow movement. If all of the strength which he exhausted in handshaking could be gathered together for one effort, it would amount to a weight of 50,000 pounds, or twenty-five tons.

ALEXANDER E. ORR MAY SUCCEED JOHN A. McCALL

Head of Rapid Transit Commission
Slated for Presidency of New York Life—Peabody Office.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Alexander E. Orr, head of the Rapid Transit Commission, will probably succeed John A. McCall in the presidency of the New York Life. It was learned today that Mr. McCall has turned over to the company a check for $25,000, covering money that Andrew Hamilton received in 1894 and which are unaccounted for in detail. The board of trustees meets tomorrow to act on Mr. McCall's resignation.

A misunderstanding of a statement made it appear that the board of trustees had acted on Mr. McCall's resignation on Saturday. Corrected information develops that the resignation was pre-empted on Saturday and will be presented to the trustees tomorrow.

Charles A. Peabody today assumes the office of president of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, relieving Frederic Cromwell, its secretary, who has been acting president. The end of Robert H. McCurdy as general manager of the company, which means a saving of $30,000 a year to the policyholders. One hundred thousand more will be saved on Mr. Peabody's salary, which is to be $50,000 instead of the $150,000 Richard A. McCurdy received.

CHICAGO AND NORTHWEST TO ADD 500 MILES ROAD

When extensions now being built are completed the Chicago and Northwestern railroad will have added 528 miles of new road to its system. The work, it is expected, will be finished before the close of another year.

The line from Casper to Shoshone will be opened next June. It will penetrate the big Shoshone reservation, and open up an extensive tract of fine agricultural country.

This road is pre-eminent among the Western group for the amount of its double-track line. It was the first to double track the entire distance from Chicago to the Missouri river, a distance of 490 miles.

ROCK ISLAND WILL SPEND $7,000,000

During the coming year 600 miles of Rock Island track on various divisions will be rehabilitated with rock and 300 miles renewed with 85-pound steel rails. During the year $6,800,000 will be expended for improvements, exclusive of new equipment, and 100 miles of track will be equipped with the most approved system of automatic block signals. President Winchell says:

"Rock Island prospects could not be better. Everybody is busy everywhere. The volume of traffic is steadily increasing, which means a corresponding increase in earnings."

AGED WOMEN TO VISIT WHITE HOUSE

Representative Alexander, of Buffalo, was at the White House today and obtained a card of admission to the parlors for two venerable Washington ladies who have lived here four score years without visiting the Executive Mansion. They are the Misses Green, daughters of Brigadier General Green, a United States army officer, who died during the Mexican war. The elder of the two sisters is eighty-two and the other is eighty years old. They will visit the White House some time today or tomorrow.

DRYDOCK DEWEY MAKES SLOWER TIME THAN HOPED

The drydock Dewey is at present less than 300 miles southeast from Cape Henry, according to wireless dispatches received at the Navy Department, although it is now more than four days at sea. This makes the average speed considerably less than 100 miles a day.

SOME GOALS OF FIRE FOR GOVERNOR DAVIS

President to Repay Curtiss With Big Check to Help
Fighting Governor of Arkansas to Pay Off Large Debt Now Hovering Over the State.

Governor Jefferson Davis, of Arkansas, is not a very good friend of the President, and seldom communicates with him with the usual good feeling on important matters shown by the majority of the State governors. Whenever he counts the number of hands shaken with the President, he is generally stiff and much to the point.

His last communication was a letter dated December 21, and was a curt request that the President send him $15,000 with which to pay claims now due which developed through the enforcement of the quarantine laws of Arkansas between August 1, 1905, and October 31, 1905, in preventing and suppressing the spread of yellow fever.

Under the act of March 3, 1905, the President is authorized to use the unexpended balances of sums appropriated by the sundry civil appropriation, in addition to $100,000, to prevent the spread of disease during epidemics which threaten to spread generally.

The letter of Governor Davis was referred by the President to Secretary Shaw, who in turn asked Comptroller Tracewell for a decision. The Comptroller after quoting the law, said that he thought the President was authorized to send the governor the amount requested.

Therefore, the fighting governor will shortly receive a big check from the President with which to pay the bills which are now pouring into the State treasury.
